A Mentor would be available to another member to serve as an experienced and trusted adviser about writing matters. The specifics of the relationship would be agreed between mentor and mentee. Mentors could offer such service as editorial comment, informal discussion of advancing one's literary skills, the presentation of materials, help in exploring publication and other assistance as agreed.

A Critic would provide comment and constructive criticism at the request of a member on the member's presentations to the Club or other literary works for which the member seeks review and improvement. A Critic's role is to be supportive and helpful to the member, not to judge a work but to offer suggestions on how the member may enrich and improve a writing or presentation.
